Calling Out Sin

Luke 11:37-46; 12:1-3

The Point: As we call out sin for what it is, we can point others to God.

The Bible Meets Life: A recent post in my social media feed had a headline that read, "Stop slicing your red and green peppers wrong!" Sure, it's click bait, but I watched anyway. The chef in the video demonstrated the wrong way to cut a green pepper, which required numerous cuts and ended up with the seeds everywhere. After shaking his finger in a "don't do that!" fashion, he cored a pepper using three slices with not a seed in sight and then cut the three pieces of pepper in long, symmetrical slices. I'm not sure there is a wrong way to slice a pepper, but the chef made this method look easy.

Believers need to connect with others in the same way the chef didn't just show the wrong way to slice a pepper; he also showed the right way. Likewise, when we encounter those enslaved to sin, we must point out the sin but also point to the One who can forgive sin.

Live It Out: Confess. Before we call out the sins of others, we must admit our own sin. Confess your sins to the Lord. Make confession of sin part of your daily devotion. Assess. Who do you know who needs forgiveness of sin? Begin praying for their salvation and for the opportunity to point them to Jesus. Express. Using your phone, record yourself calling out your sin. Listen to your tone of voice, look for compassion and care in the words you say, and correct any obstacle that might hinder a positive response.
