When Your Finances Fall Short

Luke 12:13-21; 21:1-4

The Point: Trust in God is far richer than any financial prosperity.

The Bible Meets Life: The story plays out repeatedly. The multimillionaire lives in a beautiful home right on the beach. Wow! That's living! But he's diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and suddenly all the externals can't cure what's happening inside him. A young lady has a portfolio that soared to heights she never thought possible. But a pirate on a computer across the ocean gets her personal information and passwords. In a matter of hours, it's all gone.

There are so many things that can change our status—wildfires, market crashes, bad choices, addictions, illnesses, or even just plain ignorance. There is one certainty. At the end of our lives, we all leave this earth with empty pockets. The only account that matters is your connection to God.

People see money as an asset. Jesus views money quite differently. He sees it as a barometer. How we manage our money reflects our values, motives, and even our faith. Will we pass the test, even when finances fall short? It's not a money issue; it's a heart issue.

Live It Out: Investigate: Take a dive into your checking account and make a note of how much you give and how much you waste. Pray: Ask God to give you the determination to give sacrificially and valiantly. Sacrifice: As you begin a new year, take the leap into the realm of generosity through tithing. If you aren't tithing, what are you waiting for? Trust God to provide for your needs (Phil. 4:19). If you've been tithing, challenge yourself to sacrifice an area of spending so you can give radically.
