God Speaks and We Respond
Psalm 119:30-40

In Focus: When we discover God's will, we are to follow it.

Look at our World: We often know what we should do, but we choose not to do it. For example, many of us can talk about the benefits of a healthy diet and exercise, even though we do not exercise or eat right. Even more tragic is when God's will is clearly laid out before us, but we choose to do things our own way instead. Ignoring God's living plan for our lives carries consequences, but obedience leads to great blessing.

A key part of developing a biblical lens is an understanding of who we are in Christ. Being a follower of Christ means living under His lordship in full obedience. As we discern God's will, we are to obey it.

We are all involved in a sequence of choices. Those choices are either leading us into deeper intimacy with Christ, or they are causing our love for Him to grow dangerously cold. When God speaks, do not allow even a moment's delay in your response. Settle your "yes" in advance.

Live It Out: View of God. When was the last time you clearly knew that God spoke to you? How did you respond? If you did not obey, settle that with God now. What do you expect God to teach you about Himself through this experience? View of Self. What act of obedience is required from you today? What implications are there for you? Write these things down as God makes them clear. Then ask Him for the strength to carry them out. View of Others. What opportunities has God laid before your church? How will you respond in obedience together? Meet with some other church members to pray about next steps, committing to follow through with what God reveals.
