Joshua: A Faith Rooted in God's Word

Joshua 1:1-9, 16-18

The Point: Faith is grounded in obedience to God's Word.

The Bible Meets Life: We dream about becoming our heroes because we hold them in such high regard. It's extremely rare for a man or woman to capture the status of a national hero. Based upon the evidence, the United States of America's chief hero is George Washington. States, cities, a district, and countless other streets and buildings are named after this iconic general and first president. Considerably less is known about Washington's successor as general.

The men and women who have followed in the footsteps of Washington's military and public service since have learned from his example, but undoubtedly, they've developed the skills and confidence that qualify them for service in these vital roles on their own. And future leaders will gain valuable wisdom and personal courage as they study the lives of these heroes too. The cycle continues.

Joshua, God's chosen successor of Moses, Israel's national hero, witnessed Moses's humility and great faith as he prepared himself to be obedient to God when called upon. In this study, we'll be students of Joshua's faith grounded in obedience to God's Word. And who knows what God will choose to do through us as a result?

Live It Out: Observe. Faith can be strengthened by observing people who live a faith-based life. Choose someone in your life who walks with God and carefully observe how this person follows Him. Perhaps you could shadow this individual for a day and learn from him or her. Focus. Observing others' beliefs is a great first step, but ultimately your faith should be centered on God's Word. Focus your attention on God's Word, and your faith will grow in a manner that pleases God. Read, study, and make God's Word the foundation of your faith. Display. Let your faith practice be an example for other people to follow. Seek out others to mentor and be their example of living a life of faith. Remember to be strong and courageous!
